Cet évangéliaire irlandais s'est retrouvé à Saint Gall, en Suisse alémanique, car cette abbaye a été créée à l'emplacement d'un ermitage, lui-même implanté là par un moine insulaire en 612.

Des moines irlandais passaient fréquemment là, se rendant à Rome ou à l'abbaye de Bobbio, fondée par Saint Colomban.

Le catalogue de la bibliothèque de Saint Gall mentionnait plus de 30 manuscrits irlandais vers la fin du IX<sup>e</sup> siècle. Il en reste 15, en plus ou moins bon état. Celui-ci est le plus complet.

Il provient très probablement d'un scriptorium irlandais où il a été créé dans la seconde partie du VIII<sup>e</sup> siècle ou au tout début du IX<sup>e</sup>.

C'est un ouvrage de 268 pages de parchemin de 29.5 x 22.5 centimètres écrit en latin en caractères de type insulaire.

Il est conservé dans la magnifique bibliothèque de Saint Gall (ci-dessous) sous le code Sang. 51.
